

Welcome to Cherrapunjee, locally known as Sohra - a land of breathtaking beauty and exotic landscapes.

Cherrapunjee is credited as being the wettest place on Earth and holds the all-time record for the most rainfall in a year.

The old Cherra or Sohrarim was the original Cherra village but with the coming of the British the village came to be known as 'Sohra' or present day Cherrapunjee. It was here that the British realised the enormity and intensity of the rainfall and set up a meteorological office for measuring the rain. Sohra was declared by the British to be the capital of Assam in 1832, which was later shifted to Shillong in 1866 due to the inclement weather. Sohra is also significant for being the first British outpost in North East India.

Sohra House celebrates the legacy of the Raj and the erstwhile feeling of the British bungalows of Kut Madan of which only a glimmer of brilliance remains.

Our menu is a mix of comfort food layered with Chef's innovations and local flavours. Sit back and soak in the endless vistas or listen to therapeutic sound of the waterfalls and rain while indulging in some delicious food.

Bon Appetit!
